WHAT IT MEANS FOR EVERYONEFederal Uses (also see the selected statutory uses on the next page):

- Provides a vital measure of general economic circumstances
- Used to determine poverty status
- Used to assess the need for various types of assistance
- Included in Federal allocation formulas for nearly all governmental areas

Community Impact:

- Guides funding for social services distributed to local agencies
- Identifies local areas eligible for grants to run job training and other employment programs
- Used to allocate funds to areas requiring housing assistance and home energy aid
- Used to distribute funds to improve the education of economically disadvantaged children

WHY WE ASK IT THIS WAY

In household surveys, respondents tend to underreport income. Asking the list of specific sources of income helps respondents remember all income amounts that have been received, and asking total income increases the overall response rate and thus, the accuracy of the answers to the income questions. The eight specific sources of income also provide needed detail about items such as earnings, retirement income, and public assistance. Answers to the income questions are used to derive poverty status.

- Helps in evaluating the impact of immigration on the economy and job markets and this information is included in required reports to Congress
- Used by the Office of Management and Budget, under the Paperwork Reduction Act, as part of the criteria to define metropolitan areas

- Used to pinpoint state and local areas with a labor force surplus for programs that promote business opportunities under the Labor Surplus Areas Program
- Used under the Americans with Disabilities Act to assess job complaints based on disability
- Used to identify local areas that need education and employment programs to improve the conditions of refugees under the Refugee Education Assistance Act

WHY WE ASK IT THIS WAY

This series of questions provides information needed to classify the entire working-age population into categories showing the labor force status of the Nation. The distinctions between these categories make it possible to calculate meaningful measures of labor force conditions, such as the unemployment rate and the employment-population ratio. Also, these questions identify specific segments of the population (e.g., the civilian labor force), which are critical in compiling other statistics such as the occupational data needed for equal employment opportunity programs.

WHAT IT MEANS FOR EVERYONE

Federal Uses (also see the selected statutory uses on the opposite page):

- Used to formulate policy and programs for employment, career development, and training
- Needed to measure compliance with anti-discrimination policies
- Used in analysis for mandated Congressional reports on the labor force
- Used by the National Center for Health Statistics to compute vital statistics
- Required by the Bureau of Economic Analysis to develop its state per capita income estimates which are used in the allocation formulas or eligibility criteria of more than 20 Federal programs such as Medicaid

- Helps the Environmental Protection Agency, under the Toxic Substances Control Act, to identify occupations and industries that expose people to harmful chemicals and that adversely affect the environment

Community Impact:

- Used to help create new jobs by providing companies with information about where to locate new plants, stores, or offices
- Needed under the Older Americans Act to plan job training programs for seniors
- Used by the Health Professions Reporting System to assess the need for staff in health care occupations

WHY WE ASK IT THIS WAY

These questions describe the work activity and occupational skills of the American labor force. Industry is the kind of business in which an individual works, while occupation is the kind of work that the individual does. Class of worker refers to the type of employment such as private, government, self employed or working as an unpaid family worker. The various parts of this subject work together to provide a consistent approach to classifying individuals into specific industries and occupations based on standard detailed classification systems. The two major purposes for the year last worked question are to reduce respondent burden and to identify the experienced civilian labor force. This question screens out people who do not need to answer questions on industry, occupation, and class of worker. Only the experienced civilian labor force (i.e., persons who have worked in the past five years) is asked to provide information on their last job.

HOW WE ASK IT

WHAT IT MEANS FOR EVERYONE

Federal Uses (also see the selected statutory uses on the opposite page):

- Used by the Dept. of Justice to comply with provisions of the Civil Rights Act to determine the availability of individuals for work
- Helps the Dept. of Labor to plan Federal farmworker programs and to construct the Consumer Price Index
- Needed to provide reliable data to determine the employment resources available when considering government programs that provide Federal assistance to areas
- Needed to characterize workers by full-time/part-time and full-year/part-year status
- Used to collect accurate income data by defining the universe of persons who should have earnings as part of their total income

Community Impact:

- Used under the Older Americans Act to plan employment programs for the elderly
- Needed by researchers to analyze differences between men and women or among various race or ethnic groups for individuals with similar weeks or hours worked
- Provides information to help companies decide where to place new plants or offices
- Used under the Civil Rights Act for legal cases on discrimination

WHY WE ASK IT THIS WAY

This series of questions provides information needed to put earnings data into perspective. Since all information related to income refers to the past calendar year, the information about work status last year is necessary to approximate hourly and weekly earnings. This information makes it possible to take into account differences in work input (e.g., full time, part time, full year, part year) when making income comparisons among various groups. Questions about the number of weeks worked and the usual hours worked also are used to assign values to missing responses to the questions about earnings.

WHAT IT MEANS FOR EVERYONE

Federal Uses (also see the selected statutory uses on the opposite page):

- Used primarily by the Dept. of Veterans Affairs to measure the needs of veterans
- Used to evaluate veterans' programs dealing with education, employment, and health care
- Used to conduct analysis, program planning, and budgeting for Federal veterans' programs
- Provides data for reports to Congress on state projections of veterans' facilities and services

Community Impact:

- Used at state and county levels to plan programs for medical and nursing home care for veterans
- Needed by the Dept. of Veterans Affairs to plan the locations and sizes of veterans' cemeteries
- Used by local agencies, under the Older Americans Act, to develop health care and other services for elderly veterans
- Used, under the Public Health Service Act, as one factor to determine the segments of the population who may not be receiving needed medical services
- Used to allocate funds to states and local areas for employment and job training programs for veterans under the Job Training Partnership Act

WHY WE ASK IT THIS WAY

Answers to these questions provide specific information about the characteristics of veterans. Veteran status is used to identify veterans with active duty military service and service in the military Reserves and the National Guard. Census data define a civilian veteran as a person 16 years old and over who served (even for a short time) but is not now serving on active duty in the United States Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps or Coast Guard, or who served as a Merchant Marine seaman during World War II. Period of military service distinguishes veterans who served during wartime periods from those whose only service was during peacetime. Questions about period and length of military service provide necessary information to estimate the number of veterans that are eligible to receive specific benefits.
