Background Information

The Moving to Opportunity (MTO) final, or long-term, adult short-form survey instrument appears in its entirety further below. Immediately below is some additional background information about the instrument.

Short-Form vs. Full Instrument: The full version of the MTO final survey is available at www.mtoresearch.org/instruments/final_hhold.pdf. The short-form version of the survey is an abbreviated version of the full instrument. In the last two months of survey fielding, respondents who were unwilling to complete the full survey instrument were given the option of completing this short-form version of the instrument. Only a small handful of adults opted for the short-form survey.

The remainder of the background information below is about the short-form version of the instrument. See the link above for further details about the administration of the adult survey more generally. Users are encouraged to review the background information for the full instrument before using this document.

Administration of the Short-Form Survey:

- The short-form survey was administered to a small handful of adult respondents in March and April 2010.
- The instrument as presented below is the survey specifications as opposed to the actual survey instrument, which was administered via a computer program that guided the interviewer through the skip patterns.
- Short-form survey interviews were conducted both in person and by telephone and in both English and Spanish.
- The full survey instrument included 24 modules (or sections), whereas the short-form instrument included only 7 of the 24 modules in the full instrument. Additionally, the short-form versions of the 7 modules included fewer questions than the versions in the full instrument did.
- The short-form instrument was created directly from the full instrument without renumbering items, so the modules do not all begin with an item numbered 1. If the first item in the full instrument version of the module that was retained for the short-form was numbered 6, then the first item in the short-form module below will be 6.

Variable Naming Convention: Each survey item is labeled with a three-letter acronym that corresponds to the survey module name. Each survey module acronym begins with “H” because the adult survey is a household-level survey (the adults answered questions about themselves but also many questions about the household and its members). The second and third letters of the acronym correspond to the survey module, e.g. “EM” for the Adult Employment module. Items within each module are numbered, and in some cases items in a sequence use the same number and are unique by letter (e.g. HIN14a, HIN14b, HIN14c, etc.).

Furthermore, in the pages below, each survey question is labeled with both the raw survey data variable name as well as the field tag, which includes source survey information. For example, for the first question in the Income and Public Assistance module the raw survey data variable is HIN6 and the field tag is HIN6_D6_MTO, where “MTO” indicates that the question was used on the interim MTO survey and “D6” is the item number from the interim survey. Most MTO final survey questions, including those from the interim survey, were borrowed from other well-known survey such as the Current Population Survey and the National Health Interview Study. See the table below for a list of source survey acronyms. In cases where a long series of final survey questions was replicated from the interim survey or borrowed from another survey, the variable name (as well as the field tag) will include the source survey item number in the raw variable name. For example, item HEM1_C1 is borrowed from item C1 on the interim survey (field tag HEM1_C1_MTO), and item HDE1_D1 was borrowed from item D1 on the National Comorbidity Survey (field tag HDE1_D1_NCS).

Source Survey Acronyms¹

Acronym	Survey
MTO	Moving To Opportunity Interim Survey ²
ORIG	Original
NCS	National Comorbidity Survey
SF36	Short Form 36-Item (part of the Medical Outcomes Study)

Skip Patterns and Question Text Fills: The instrument included a variety of skip patterns that are all indicated below, usually in bold text in parentheses or via a checkpoint. A typical skip pattern is exemplified by item HEM1. Respondents who reported that they did not work for pay last week simply moved on to HEM2, but respondents who were working and respondents who voluntarily reported that they weren’t working because they were retired, disabled, or unable to work skipped HEM2 (asking why they weren’t working). In other cases a skip pattern in the format “GO TO END OF SURVEY” routed respondents to end of the instrument and they were asked no further questions (see for example HGA5d_G5, where respondents who never had a month-long period of anxiety/worry skip the remainder of the Generalized Anxiety Disorder (GAD) questions and thus to the end of the survey).

Checkpoints typically call on multiple pieces of information collected earlier in the survey and then route respondents to multiple destinations later in the survey based on that information. The mental health modules included many checkpoints, for example, because diagnosis of a mental health disorder is contingent on experiencing a certain number of symptoms. The survey asked questions about those symptoms and then included a checkpoint that routed respondents who have experienced enough symptoms to possibly be diagnosed with the disorder to additional follow-up questions and those who did not experience enough symptoms to the next section of the survey.

One key checkpoint that skipped many respondents fully past multiple modules is HSC15_SC36_CHKPT at the end of the Adult Mental Health Screener module. The screener asked a high-level symptom questions corresponding to the depression and Generalized Anxiety

Disorder, and respondents who did not endorse the high-level symptoms were assumed not to ever have had the corresponding disorder and therefore were skipped past the module entirely. Respondents who did not endorse any of the three depression symptoms (HSC6_SC21, HSC7_SCSC22, and HSC8_SC23) skipped the depression (HDE) module, and those who also did not endorse the GAD symptoms (HSC12_SC26, HSC13_SCS26a, and HSC14_SC26b) skipped both the depression and the GAD (HGA) modules. Respondents who endorsed none of the symptoms in the screener skipped all the way to the end of the short-form survey.

The instrument also contains a number of question text “fills” that were based on information that was preloaded at the individual-level into the software used to administer the survey or information collected via an earlier question on the survey. Examples of preloaded information include the current year, which determined the year of income that was referenced in the Income and Public Assistance module. An example of information collected during the survey itself that was used to create fill values for later questions was whether the type of depression symptoms experienced by the respondent, which were used to create text fills after item HDE3_D9 that were used throughout the rest of the module.

Colored Text and Post-Codes: Blue text indicates interviewer instructions that survey respondents did not see. Text in red such as “ Page 18” refers to the response booklet that respondents were given at the beginning of the administration of the survey. For survey questions with a long list of response options, the booklet allowed the respondents to view the list directly as opposed to having to remember all of the responses as they were read by the interviewer. Other red text is notes to the programmer who created the computer-based version of the survey instrument and can be ignored (neither the respondents nor the interviewers saw this text as the interviews were conducted).

This version of the instrument also includes the post-coded survey responses for open-ended items. Some questions included a series of specific responses but also an open-ended “Other: Please specify” option. Interviewers manually entered the open-ended responses, and those responses were then converted to post-codes for analysis. In some cases the open-ended responses were mapped back to one of the original responses, but in other cases new response categories were created. Note that the respondents did not see the list of post-coded responses when completing the survey. See items HEM2_C2 and HEM2a_C2 for an example.

[F1] -- Help

Please think of an episode of being (Fill2[sad/or/discouraged/or/uninterested]) lasting two weeks or longer when you also had other problems at the same time, such as changes in sleep, appetite, the ability to concentrate and remember, feelings of low self worth, and other problems. If one particular episode of this sort that stands out in your mind as the worst one you ever had, then think of that one. If no one episode stands out as worst, think of the last time you had a bad episode.

During that episode, which of the following problems did you have most of the day nearly every day:
