

You helped us prepare, now make it complete.

Respond to the 2020 Census.

By participating in the 2018 Census Test, Providence County played an important role in helping the Census Bureau prepare for the 2020 Census. Providence County residents worked as census takers, talked about the importance of the census to the community, and responded.

Thanks to your support, we know the 2020 Census is ready for the nation.

Now, we need your response to make the 2020 Census complete.

Even if you responded to the test, you still need to respond to the census—online, by phone, or by mail. Beginning in mid-March, please respond online or by phone to ensure Providence County and Rhode Island are accurately counted. Some households will receive a paper questionnaire in mid-March as well. By mid-April, all households that haven't responded yet will receive a paper questionnaire, giving you the option of responding by mail too.

Your response helps shape decisions about how billions of dollars in public funds flow into communities for schools, fire and emergency services, roads and bridges, and health clinics and hospitals.
