Since the document contains tables and numerical data, a natural text representation would include the tables and corresponding analysis or commentary. However, without the actual tables, it's impossible to provide a complete natural text representation. The tables would typically be analyzed for trends, comparisons, and insights, but this cannot be done without the actual data.