POPULATION OF CITIES OF 25,000 OR MORE: 1960

(The statistics shown here are taken from Final Report PC(1)-1A, which is scheduled to be published within the next few weeks and which will contain additional summary information on the geographic distribution of the population)

There were 676 cities of 25,000 inhabitants or more in the United States as of April 1, 1960. These cities had a combined population of 76.0 million, or 42 percent of the total population of 179.3 million persons enumerated in the 50 States and the District of Columbia in the 1960 Census of Population. In 1950, there were 481 cities of this size in the United States, with a combined population of 62.0 million. The cities ranged in size in 1960 from Calumet City, Ill., with 25,000 inhabitants, to New York City with 7.8 million inhabitants.

The total number of Americans living in cities of 25,000 or more increased by 23 percent between 1950 and 1960. However, one out of every five cities with 25,000 inhabitants or more in 1960 actually had fewer residents in 1960 than in 1950. Eight of the ten largest cities in 1960 had population losses over the decade. Only Los Angeles and Houston gained. As shown in the summary table below, losses were less frequent among the smaller cities than among the larger cities.

Included in the total of 676 are 19 which were incorporated as cities between 1950 and 1960. The largest of the newly incorporated cities is Norwalk, Calif., with a 1960 population of 88,739. Other newly incorporated places with 50,000 inhabitants or more are Garden Grove, Downey, and Lakewood, Calif.; Bloomington, Minn.; and Kettering, Ohio.
