Most U.S. Census Bureau data are available through the Census Bureau’s Internet home page, www.census.gov. In addition, there are numerous outlets locally where the public can view reports, request printouts of tabulations, or otherwise obtain assistance in accessing, understanding, and using Census 2000 information. These local outlets include State Data Centers (SDCs), Census Bureau Regional Offices; public and academic libraries; state, local, and regional agencies; chambers of commerce; and not-for-profit and community organizations.

State Data Center Program

www.census.gov/sdc/www/

Through agreements with the governor of each state and territory, the Census Bureau and state governments make data available locally to the public through a network of state agencies, universities, libraries, regional and local governments, and other local organizations. State Data Center agencies and local affiliates provide training and technical assistance in accessing and using Census Bureau data for research, administration, planning and decision making by local governments, the business community, and other interested data users. Contact the organization listed below for information about your state or for the location of affiliated agencies in your community:

Federal Depository Libraries

www.access.gpo.gov/su_docs/fdlp/libpro.html

About 1,400 large public and academic libraries participate in the Federal Depository Library (FDL) program. These libraries receive Census Bureau and other government agency publications and information free of charge and, in exchange, provide local, public no-fee access and assistance in using the information. For a list of Federal Depository Libraries in your community, see: www.access.gpo.gov/su_docs/locators/findlibs/index.html

Census Depository Libraries

The Census Bureau has designated (123) libraries throughout the country as Census Depository Libraries (CDLs). The libraries are located in cities with a population greater than 25,000 and are not in a Metropolitan Statistical Area served by a Federal Depository Library (FDL). Just as the FDLs, the CDLs receive Census Bureau publications, CD-ROMs, and information free of charge and in exchange, provide local, public no-fee access, and assistance in using the information.

Census Information Center Program

www.census.gov/clo/www/cic.html

The Census Information Center (CIC) is a cooperative program between the U.S. Census Bureau and 59 national, regional, and local nonprofit organizations. This program represents the interests of under-served communities. The centers will serve as repositories of census data and reports, making census information and data available to the public and the communities they serve. The CICs use census data in areas such as program planning, advocacy needs assessment, defining service areas, public policy development, developing new business enterprises, and conducting race/ethnic-related research.
